BY PERMISSION of

This present Evening, will be performed all the Art and Dexterity of Hand, in its various Branches.

THE SO MUCH FAMED ENGLISH HUSSAR,

Is just arrived from LONDON, and means to display his uncommon Deceptions, which was never before attempted in ENGLAND or IRELAND by any Person but himself, and will forfeit one hundred Guineas to any one that will do the same on his Principles. The HUSSAR has had the honour to perform before the Royal Family, and several Persons of Distinction, and received great Applause.—He is not the least afraid of giving great Satisfaction to such Ladies and Gentlemen of this Town, as honour him with their Company.

The HUSSAR displays above three hundred different Deceptions on Cards. &c. which he never before handled.

1st. Makes a Card to follow him out of the Pack, which any Lady or Gentleman fixes their Thoughts on, and will make the whole Pack follow him (if required) one by one, 'til all be called for, to the astonishment of all the Spectators.

2d. Tells the Thoughts of any one in Company by Cards; likewise fires a Pistol loaded with Ball, through any Card the Gentlemen fix on, throwing the Pack along the Top of the Room; the Ball shall go through the identical Card, without damaging the rest of the Pack.

3d. Likewise gives a Lecture on Cards, &c. to show how the unwary are taken in by Sharpers;—a great Caution to youth.

4th. The Game of Whist; the Hussar gives his Adversary nine Points of the Game, and will engage to win, without shuffling, cutting, or dealing.

5th. A Variety of curious Deceptions with Eggs and Birds, Money, Rings, Boxes, Handkerchiefs, &c. With a thousand other beautiful Deceptions, too numerous to insert.

Proper Music, Dancing, Singing, and good Decorum, &c.

To conclude with the Art of Gunnery,—that amazing Deception.

The HUSSAR gives liberty to any Gentleman to load a Gun or Pistol with Powder and Ball and lets him fire at him, and receives the Ball on the Point of a Sword or Knife;—this he does without any Coat of Armour in defence of his Body.
